Hockey Notes

The Cardinals again brought honor to the town when they stopped off long enough in Glenelg last Monday night to hand the Aces a trimming by the score of 6-3. The Aces, reputed as a clever aggregation of pucksters, found the going plenty difficult owing to the close checking of the Cardinals and were unable to beat goalie Sharpe until the last few minutes of the game when they scored two goals to avoid a shut-out.

Due to weather conditions four periods of hockey were played and in each Arrowwood was able to score. Considerable enthusiasm had been created over the match but on a handful of fans were on hand to witness the game.

In the first period the Cards took an early lead when goals were scored by McCullough on an assist by Norton, and by Oliver. The Aces had several opportunities but could not convert.

In the second period the Cards scored another pair of counters when Casey Norton again sagged the hump; then in a face-off in front of the Glenelg goal McCullough shot the hot-lead into the net. The Cardinals were playing a very effective brand of combination hockey which was baffling the Aces and continually worrying Bostie in the Glenelg fort.

Stuart Beagle had luck in the third period when he scored for the Aces in attempting to clear the puck. Luke Murray of the Aces was playing an outstanding game and his solo rushes were a treat to watch. Snaring the puck near the Aces goal McCullough laid down a perfect pass to F. Mason who made no mistake and bulged the hump once more.

It was in the fourth period that the Aces were able to score on serimenges near the goal mouth. F. Mason collected Arrowwood's sixth goal and the Aces were playing every man up when the final whistle was sounded. Only one penalty was handed out by referee Cam Brown.

Arrowwood—Sharpe, Dumka Stull, Beagle, Norton, Mason, McCullough, E. Mason, S. Beagle, Oliver, Aeslettine.
Miners—Arrowwood 3
The Indian Miners very nearly handed the Cardinals their first defeat of the season when they outplayed the Cards on Arrowwood ice Friday of last week. The game was a league fixture and with Rad Cross withdrawing from the league the final standing was Arrowwood.

Hockey Dance A Success

The Arrowwood Consolidated School auditorium was the scene of merriment last Friday night when the Cardinal Hockey club held their annual dance. The music supplied by the Rhythm Boys of Champion kept the crowd in a lively mood and at no time during the evening was there a lull in the excitement. A large crowd assembled from Arrowwood, Gleichen, Queenstown and surrounding districts, and everyone present expressed praise for the efforts made by the Cardinals.

The Cardinals wish to thank everyone who contributed to the success of the dance, especially the ladies who donated cakes, and also Mr. Mackie. The Club realized about $17 for their efforts.

Beware The Danger Spots

The inauguration throughout Canada of new social services, and the extension of social services already existing, are policies to which it is now clear all political parties in Parliament are definitely committed. Since the beginning of the present century there has been a steady growth, not only in Canada but in all countries in the number and scope of these services of a social character, and it is now evident that the people of this Dominion are in favor of more and still larger and comprehensive services of this character.

This development is in line with modern trends and the new conception that all the people are responsible for the welfare of each individual citizen. We refer to this as a new conception, yet it is as old as civilization itself. Man is his brother's keeper and if and when man fails to discharge that responsibility to his fellowmen, then the very civilization which protects him will collapse. So it is that the great majority of people will be found to welcome the introduction and enlargement of a national programme of social services.

There are, however, one or two danger spots in connection with such a programme which the Canadian people will be well advised to recognize at the outset. These services are designed to be helpful to us as individuals and as a nation, let us therefore beware that they do not actually prove harmful.

The first danger to avoid is, that in our enthusiasm and commendable desire to provide social services, and to establish them upon a generous scale, we do not overlook it, and embark upon programmes which may prove to be beyond the financial capacity of the Canadian people to maintain. Social services such as old age pensions, mother's allowances, unemployment insurance, free medical services, etc., will cost an enormous amount of money annually. Some of these services are already costing the Federal and Provincial Governments many millions of dollars, but present expenditures are undoubtedly small in comparison with the cost of proposals now being advanced.

Each and every one of these social services can be provided and made possible by just one method, and that is taxation. That is, the community as a whole must through the payment of taxes provide the money which will be distributed through one social service or another to the people who are in need of such service. If fifty million dollars are required for, say, the payment of old age pensions throughout Canada, then taxes which will yield fifty million in revenue to the government must be imposed and paid by the people. There is no other way. This fact must be recognized, together with the further fact that there is a limit beyond which people cannot pay taxes, and any social or other service which depends upon government taxes beyond that limit will find itself in difficulty.

Once established, experience has proven that these social services grow very rapidly and that expenditures largely increase. This experience indicates a second danger spot. It is this: So long as individual men and women are required to look out for themselves and plan for their future, they will, as a rule, work, exercise some degree of thrift, and save against sickness and old age. In a word, self preservation will be one of the guiding rules of their life. But once it becomes an accepted and established fact that people will be provided for whether they are at work or not, that the community will care for them and all their life if and when sick, and that the community will support them throughout their old age and bury them when they die—then there is grave danger that the incentive which is now the great driving force in our human nature will become less, weaken and gradually die.

HE FELT MISERABLE AFTER MEALS

Acute Indigestion Relieved by Kruschen

The treatment which put this man right must surely be worth trying in every case of indigestion. Read what he says:—

"TWO years ago I suffered very much from indigestion, loss of appetite, and a most severe pain in my back. Food soured in my stomach. I felt most miserable after meals, and had no desire or appetite for them. A friend advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and I am most happy to testify that after a short time I felt the greatest relief. I continued taking Kruschen till I felt myself quite better and a new man. I feel as light-hearted as I did twenty years ago."—W. B.

What Kruschen did for him it will do for everybody else who suffers from indigestion as he did. The fact is that the "little daily dose" of Kruschen first stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion, and then ensures a complete, regular and unobstructed elimination of all waste matter every day.

Little Journeys In Science

COSMIC RAYS

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

Glass becomes negatively charged when rubbed with catkin, but positively charged when rubbed with silk. Also, a strip of sulphur becomes negatively charged when drawn between the fingers. In order to detect and measure the electric charges on any substance scientists have devised an instrument known as the electro-scope. A simple type of electro-scope consists of a bottle with a paraffin stopper, through which runs a piece of glass tubing. Passed through the glass tube is a piece of brass or copper wire from which are suspended two strips of gold leaf. A ball made of tinfoil is attached to the other end of the wire and is, of course, outside the bottle just above the paraffin stopper. Whenever the ball is given either a negative or positive charge the leaves fly apart in proportion to the amount of the charge. A rubber comb rubbed on a catkin becomes negatively charged and if the comb is placed on the tinfoil ball some of this charge is imparted to the electro-scope and the leaves will fly apart. Since the charge is negative, another negative charge will cause the leaves to spread still farther apart, whereas a positive charge will cause the leaves to fall together before again flying apart. In this way the kinds of charges may be determined. When even the best of electroscopes are charged it is observed that the gold leaves slowly come together again. This means that some electrically charged particles from the atmosphere are neutralizing the charges on the leaves. Scientists set out to discover what was causing this discharge of an electro-scope and found that it was due to certain rays which came to the earth from outer space. They are called cosmic rays.

Many attempts have been made to stop the rays coming from above the use of the most perfect insulators and the protection of the electroscopes by lead screens, several feet in thickness. These experiments suggested that there exists an unusually penetrating radiation of feeble intensity.

Scientists have carried electroscopes to points near the two poles of the earth, at the equator, and at various other latitudes. Electroscopes and similar indicating and recording devices have been sent up into the air in sounding balloons at altitudes of over 20 miles, and have been carried to altitudes of 25,000 feet in airplanes in various localities and have been taken to high mountains as well as to depths as great as 1,000 feet in lakes. All experiments show that the rays come from above the earth and so they have been called cosmic rays. Outstanding among the various investigators in this work are two American scientists, Millikan and Compton.

Stone shook his head.

"It stops up all the tubes and chokes the person to death. You've got to be right on the job." Mabel was played out. She was sick, too. The boy was taken sick in the night after Mabel. Well, she says frankly that she lost her nerve and didn't know what to do. She stood there watching the boy choke to death before her eyes. "Chantrelle" or "Vagabond" in! She saw what was taking place. She saw Mabel couldn't help herself. She pushed Mabel out of the room, pulled the rubber tube of a hot-water bottle and stuck it down the kid's throat. Then... By God, Stone. She sucked it clear! Do you get that? She gave him back his life. Any need to ask what we think of Edith Carr? There was no need. After one brief glance at Jameson, Stone knew that he could "go the limit."

"I'll tell you why I want to find old Man Kane," he said. He perched on the desk and told Jameson of his first row with Dustin. He told him of the fight with Corne and Gray in the hills above the ranch. He told how he found old Kane's last notebook and of the trip that he took with Edith. Finally he laid on the deck the pieces of rock from the mine.

"I can get Buxton right here in town to assay 'em," said Jameson. "He'll not talk if I tell him not to. . . . Go on. . . ."

"Well. . . . We were riding home when Dustin, who had been at the Hour-glass, came peering down the trail and tried to ride me down in the golpe de caballo. His horse must have slipped or something for Dustin was upset. (Jameson's eyes gleamed at that.) While he was lying there unconscious, I went through his pockets. I found a note from Joe Carr to Pegram of the Seco bank for eleven thousand dollars. Pegram had sold it to Dustin. Then, when I got to the Hour-glass, Crewe told me that Dustin had come there to tell Carr that he wanted to marry Edith. . . ."

"Well. . . . Jameson's voice took a cool edge. "Go on. . . ."

"Then I took the car and came here. . . ."

"To look for something in an encyclopedia," said Jameson.

Stone grinned. "You stick to the point, don't you? Look here. . . ."

And he laid on the littered table an envelope and the cigarette that he had taken from Dustin's pocket. He emptied the envelope on the desk and fingered the contents—three or four bits of burned cigarettes and a little pile of brown dust. Then he picked up the whole cigarette that he had taken from Dustin. "These are not tobacco," he said. "I found the sticks in the camp where Kane must have gone with Dustin. . . . Or else Dustin was alone. . . . I don't know. I want to find Kane. This stuff may be marshallina. . . . I don't know it. I know it is not tobacco in any form. Do you know tobacco? I was looking for marshallina in the book."

CHAPTER XII.

Duro Stone summed up affairs fairly accurately as he headed for Seco. That summary included Joe Carr, Frank Crewe, the Hour-glass, Dustin Kane (whom he knew not) and Edith. He grinned a little as he realized that she was not to be judged by any ordinary standards. Yet. . . .

"The dirty hound. . . . He wants to marry her. . . ."

That appealed to his sense of humor and he chuckled.

"To be sensible. . . . If I can't how can I blame another man for wanting to do what I want to do myself? Dog-gone it! It makes me tired. I've spread my rope from. . . ."

Canada to Mexico and now I've come to the end of the trail. . . . Suddenly he knew that, if Edith Carr was at the end of that trail to welcome him, he wanted no other trail. "All the same that man Dustin's a dirty hound," he muttered. "Now to try to find out what I want. . . . Here's Seco. . . ."

Seco was an ordinary cow-town with a courthouse in the middle of a square from which the rest of the town radiated. He parked in front of a small frame building that bore the sign:

SECO COURIER

Evran Jameson, Editor and Prop. "If any information is to be had it ought to be in a newspaper office," he muttered. "I don't want to go to an encyclopedia. I don't know who will have one. . . ."

A slouching man rose from a half-recumbent position across a desk and eyed him as he entered. Stone grinned affably and thrust out a hand.

"My name's Stone," he said pleasantly. "I work for Carr at the Hour-glass. Are you Mr. Jameson by any chance?"

"Not by chance, by design and for my size I think," said Jameson with a sour grin. "What can I do for you?"

"Have you got an encyclopedia in the office and if so, will you let me consult it?"

"Over on the shelf yonder," said Jameson. "Help yourself."

He watched curiously as Stone took down volume after volume. When he replaced the last with a sigh of disappointment, Jameson became frankly curious.

"Can't you find it?" he asked. "It's not in the book. . . ."

Stone perched on the desk and rolled a cigarette. "Maybe you can help me."

Mr. Jameson. Have you lived long in this part of the country?"

Jameson went to the dusty window and pointed to the great bulk of Myrant Peak that thrust above the skyline.

"When I first came here," he said, "that peak was just a hole in the ground. It's grown up since then. I haven't you say your name's Stone?"

Are you the man who slapped a drink of whisky in Corne's eyes in the Silver Dollar?"

"I reckon I did," said Stone, grinning. "Sometimes I'm mighty careless where I throw my heel-taps. Why?"

"It was you, too, who had the quarrel with Sam Dustin and who dumped him into Soda Springs, hey?"

Stone nodded. He wondered how and where Jameson had learned of that. Jameson enlightened him.

"My wife heard it. . . . from a friend and she told me. I haven't said a word about it. I thought it fairly well to see if she could help that item you want in the encyclopedia," said Jameson shortly.

"First of all. . . . Do you know an old desert-rat named Kane?"

"Who? Dad Kane? Old man? I know him. He's a good fellow but that because he always wears a shirt made of chambric silk. He says he can use it with his mercury to try his gold ore. . . . when he finds it. Of course I know it."

"Is he straight?"

"Absolutely. That is, he's perfectly honest except in minor matters. He's queer though. Tell me what these questions mean."

Stone thrust a hand deep into his coat-pocket and kept it there while he studied Jameson. He liked what he saw and his face broke into a pleasant smile.

"I've been on the Hour-glass payroll for four months now," he said irrelevantly.

"It's a good outfit," said Jameson. "I'm sorry they've had so much luck. Now take Joe Carr. He's a fine old fellow but he has dropped behind in the race for money and he will never catch up. He just doesn't know what it's all about. He's got a good outfit, too, but a good body can't help if the head is gone. Of course he's got a good man in Frank Crewe. They don't make many men like Crewe. . . ."

"And Edith. . . ."

"And Edith. . . ."

Jameson's grim face instantly lit with a light that there was no mistaking. Even the silence answered Stone's half-formed question.

"Yeah," said Jameson quietly. "Edith. . . . What about her?"

"Crewe told me that, while Edith was out riding with me, that man Dustin came over to the Hour-glass. He saw old man Carr and told him that he wanted to marry Edith."

"Tell me that again," he said earnestly. "See if I'm hearing right."

Stone told him curtly and every word sank in. Jameson nodded once or twice and waited himself on the edge of the desk.

"You listen to me," he said quietly. "You've been some months at the Hour-glass. You must know how things are out there. . . ."

Stone nodded. "I thought so. I've heard a lot of you. . . . From. . . . Oh, from some people and what I've heard I like. . . . Wait. . . ."

He stopped Stone's attempted speech. "I'm a married man, Stone. I've got the finest wife in the world and we've got two kids. One's a boy named for me. The other's a girl, Mabel; named for her mother. Some day when you have kids of your own, you'll understand what I'm trying to tell you. . . ."

Last year the boy was taken mighty sick while I was away. Edith Carr only knew us fairly well but she stopped in from time to time to see if she could help Mabel. I was over at Wilton longer than I expected and I couldn't get back. The third day Sin Young came in from Seco and told me the boy was down with a bad case of diphtheria. You can guess what that means in a place like Seco. Our only doctor then was a horse-doctor and he was generally full. I got back as soon as I could make it. It had been a cold night and Edith Carr, hearing how sick the boy was, spent it with Mabel. They spent that night trying to cook the poison out of him. . . . You know how it is. I reckon. Know anything about diphtheria?"

Miss Mac and Miss V. McLaughlin were visitors to Calgary over the week-end.

The W. I. Bridge of Thursday Feb. 28 was enjoyed by all there being seven tables. Mrs. Payne won the ladies prize. Mr. J. McRae won the gentlemen and Mr. and Mrs. Durston won the consolation prize.

Many from Queenstown attended the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Long's second daughter on Sunday, March 2. The sympathy of the community is extended to them in their recent bereavement.

A car load from Milo journeyed to Queenstown to play badminton Sunday evening.

The Red Cross Mutual Telephone Co. is now in being and will likely commence operation by the first of April. There are twenty members on its two lines, with the promise of more in the near future. All officers of the executive have been appointed and there remains only a few preliminary matters to be settled preparatory to taking these lines over from the Government.

Mrs. Larson, of Lomond, has been staying with her daughter, Mrs. Jas. Wyatt, for the last two weeks.

Mrs. McKinnon, of the Red Cross District, is confined to bed, suffering from an attack of the flu.

Grace and Freda Board were visiting at the McInnes home over the week-end.

We are pleased to note that Mr. J. Fitzpatrick, of Sunset Valley district, who recently broke his leg and later developed pleurisy, will be leaving the Hospital the first mid day.

Here and There

A further concession to the travelling public is announced by C. P. Huddell, Chairman, Canadian Passenger Association, in the statement that in future one-month round trip railway tickets previously good for continuous passage only between departure point and destination, will be valid for stop-over at intermediate points going and returning. For many years Canadian railways have been selling one-month round trip tickets at twice the one-way fare, less ten per cent., good for continuous passage only. Now, the stop-over privilege is granted without any increase in fare and passengers deciding on route to stop over, may do so on application to the conductor. This concession, it is felt by railway officials, will do much to further promote travel by rail in Canada.

W. E. Allison, manager of mail and baggage traffic, Canadian Pacific Railway, has been elected vice-president of the American Association of General Business Agents, comprising representatives of all the railways on this continent.

H. C. Groat, general superintendent, Ontario Railway, the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been promoted to the post of assistant to the vice-president with headquarters in Montreal. Mr. Groat is a well-known and popular official of the railway in Ontario, where he has been stationed for a number of years.

Figures issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics dealing with operations in August of all steam railways in Canada having annual gross revenue of at least $500,000, reveal that higher gross earnings were offset by increased expenses, including an expansion of over $500,000 in payrolls.

Mrs. A. A. Adams, of Oak Bay B.C., has been awarded first prize in the most beautiful Maple Leaf contest conducted this year by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways. More than 30,000 specimens were submitted. The largest leaf phase of the contest was won by Richard Chambers of Vancouver, who submitted a specimen with an area of 23 1/2 inches.

Five hundred school-age boys and girls of Montreal recently took advantage of the unique all-expense trip operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway from that city to Ottawa and were addressed in the Parliament Buildings by R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada. Sight-seeing auto-bus trips across Ottawa included inspection of the Houses of Parliament, the Memorial Tower and Hall of Fame, and a special recital of the 61 balls of the famous Carillon Tower.

Eyes of Love

"Carolins, were you ever in love?"

"Lawdy, chile, I ain't never been out."

"Why, Carolinas?"

"Dat's fac'. Ain't loved no black man fo' mos' twenty years, but I've loved you, honey. Plague take dis hyer eye of of mine. Keeps leakin' salt-water through my nose."

Hockey Notes

wood in the lead having lost no games. The game was played on poor ice and although the Cards were leading 3-1 in the third period, the Minors pressed hard and were successful in evening the score 3-3. A disputed goal was allowed in the third period and this seemed to give the Redkings added incentive.

The encounter provided plenty of action but the Cardinals were certainly off color. The absence of Chet Bengie on defence was keenly felt. However the Indians played offensive hockey all the way and deserved nothing less than a draw game. The goal getters for the Cardinals were Norton, P. Mason and Oliver.

Said of Scouting by E. W. Beatty, President, Boy Scout Ass'n.

At one time the Boy Scout movement was alleged to be a disguised form of military training. A generation of experience has taught us that it is a method of training soldiers—soldiers of peace, not of war.

It is based on the sound assumption that boys will be boys—that the primal instinct of young humans is to group together in gangs for mutual support in noisy, healthy and active play. It takes into consideration the essential democracy of the young—their refusal to believe that social distinctions are important. It accepts the fact that boys place little value on race or creed and only accept extreme nationalism with its crop of hatred because their elders tell them so.

In a word, the Boy Scout Movement starts with faith that boys are merely men not yet made suspicious, over-cautious or narrow-minded by their experience of a world which is too artificial.

On that basis it has built a system by which boys are given the maximum of freedom to play, to set free their abounding energy and to develop healthy contact with other boys. To this is added the minimum of formal discipline—only enough to prove the worth of organized effort without stifling initiative.

The movement covers the world, and brings the youth of nations into a great unit directed by the single ideal of play made worthy because it has a purpose.

I can offer no more powerful argument for your active support of this movement than my honest faith that a country whose leaders in public and private affairs are trained in youth to hold the ideals of the Boy Scouts will be a country in which service will be placed before profit, and the community ahead of the individual.

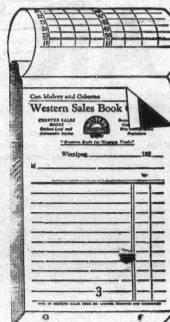

Honesty, courage, resourcefulness, clean living and kindness—these are the lessons which the Scout learns. Can any of you suggest what more we can do to help our nation and the world than to teach these?

The Boy Scout Movement, founded by Lord Baden-Powell nearly 30 years ago, has had a powerful influence in serving the Empire, while teaching its young members that there is a need for loyalty to humanity at large, which loyalty to the Empire can strengthen. It is an amazing fact that the Scout Movement the world over now numbers some two and a quarter million members.

Center-Poise Riding in a

Passengers Located Close to Center of Car

Three major engineering principles combine to give the new Ford V-8 for 1935 what Ford engineers term the "centre-poise" ride, according to Larsen Implements, local Ford dealers.

These principles are: Correct spring suspension, involving equality of front and rear spring flexibility. Proper car weight balance and passenger weight distribution.

Location of passengers close to centre of the car. Utilization of these in combination as practiced by Ford engineers, achieves for the new Ford V-8 remarkable improvement in riding comfort without sacrifice of either safety or stability.

The Captain and the crew, the ship's Doctor, and more particularly the kindly, motherly stewardesses of the Canadian Pacific liner Montclare all shared the responsibility of personally conducting the recent trans-Atlantic journey of Mary Estella Barry of Halifax. Mary Estella has six months of very active life behind her, and the best wishes of the Montclare's personnel attend her happy years to come. The journey was necessary because Mary Estella is motherless, and her father, Peter Barry of Halifax, though unwilling to part with his baby daughter, yielded to the wishes of his parents in Leith, Scotland, to send the baby to them. Her grandparents met her at Glasgow.
